

NMNC 6.603.04 Psychiatric Visiting Nurse (Home Health Services)

Psychiatric Visiting Nursing/Home Health Services is a short-term treatment delivered in the member's home or living environment to treat a DSM or corresponding ICD diagnosis with psychiatric medication management. This is most common after a member is discharged home from an inpatient psychiatric unit, and is considered high-risk for decompensation and readmission if his/her medication regime is not continued. Members approved for this level of care require ongoing intervention by nursing staff for psychiatric medication monitoring, usually due to a history of treatment non-compliance, or difficulties ambulating, which present a barrier for attending community medication management appointments. Psychiatric visiting nurses may also administer long-acting, injectable antipsychotic medications; obtain weekly blood work for a member; and provide other psychiatric nursing services for which they are licensed, until long-term arrangements can be made. Psychiatric visiting nurse staff are generally employed by Home Health or Visiting Nurse agencies and would not function as an independent clinician or contractor.
